THE END OF THE PLAY. by should your mother. Charles be wearing at her darling a gray to how to that willed it a That darliy raise the fate of all, at sends the respite or the blow. That's free to give or to exall. o such shall mourn, in life's advance, Dear hopes, dear friends, until nely h shall grieve for many a forfeit chance, And longing peasing unfaitalled. PROM WASHINGTON. The confiscation ast amendment, providing for the sale of the real estate of rebels is still under disensation. In that discussion the Duion members have by far the best of the arrument, and the longer the discussion continues, the greater the number of points and authorities brought out to prove that real exists of rebels can be sold. Gen. Garfield of Ohio, made a very fine speech yesterday after I had dispatched my letter, on the Union side of the question. He showed that the terson refused to allow the claim of the British Government—that this property should be restored to them—on the ground that it was taken under beiligerent law and was consequently rightfully confuscated. Subsequantly the British Government school bedged the validity of Mr. Jefferson's sposition, and tiself, from time to time made appropriations to those Tories for the losses they had sustained. This is a very strong point. I do not see how it can be got over by the opposition. Gen. Garfleid is a fine looking man, though not remarkable in his appearance. He hair is light brown, his eyes blue, his complexion fair but not fierid, his frame is well kult and powerful, and he looks as if he could sustain a great deal of hatting, declined.

Or is the tender of hospitality to be construed in a Pil-k wicklism sense? The resolutions say that a committee of seven are "to make necessary arrangements for said Coavention." Boes this mean that the City Council shall provide a hall at the city's expense for the Copperhead Convention? That would seem to be the purport of the language of the resolution. The committee is not only to act in the "reception," but in the "secommodation" of the delegates, which looks to billeting the delegates in the hotels at the expense of the city. Perhaps this also is to be construed in a Pickwickism manner.

The second whereas, in giving a reason for extending the "hospitalities of the city" to the Copperhead Convention, asserts a down right untruth in speaking of the organization that sends the delegates hither as "a great" and positicite party." It may be a "great" right untruth is speaking of the organization that sends the delegates hither as "a great" party, but if it were a "patriotic party," It may be a "great" party, but if it were a "patriotic party," on beloved country would not now be deneched in fratricidal blood. Some "democrate are patriotic; as a party they can lay claim to not such honor. Every State that seceded was under democratic control at the time. Every Itader in the receivaline called himself a "democrati". The party is patriotic in spots, but is rotten and traitorous to an awful extent: and that is the reason why so many democrate have abandoned it.

The democratic party has plunged the nation into civil war to foster, build up and perpetuate a slave oligarchy whose ambition could not be satisfied with anything short of ruling the nation and trampling upon the rights of human nature. It is the boast of the party that it is notional and exits in all the States. Its chief strength and power is in the Southern States. For many years the Southern wing, and dictated the policy and platform of the whole party. To day the "democratic" States, and they alone, are in rebellion against their government. The deserters and reluctant conscripts are nearly all members of the old Nationi Whig party, which, North and South, was opposed to secession and rebellion. The robellion was commenced under the ampless and patronage of the last "democratic" administration, which sided and abetted its incipient stages until it was ripe for action.

They had closely examined every place which gave access to the Palace of the Tulieries, and repeatedly visited the Bois de Boulogne when the Emperor went to skake. Their plan was that wherever or whenever the opportunity presented itself they were to throw their shells (said to be more desiructive than those of Orsini) under his borse's feet, and at once rash on him and his attendants with their revolvers and poingards. Greco added that the populards, which he had received from Maszini, were poisoned, and it seems on examination that the points and bladus are of a peculiar color, as if they had been long steeped in some liquid. The conspirators, who declare that they were in constant correspondence with Maszini, resolved to effect their purpose on Monday or Tuesday last at the Bols de Beulogne. On the previous Saturday the shells were louded and everything prepared. They were, however, out of money, having alresdy sport the 4,000. Maszini had given them in October. Their way of life contrasted strangely with the secret object on which they were bont. They had been constantly tracked by the police, and from their frequent changes of domicile seemed to be perfectly aware of it, yet they acted as if they wished to give every facility to those who were so vigiliantly watching them. They dealed themselves no pleaance; they lived jovously, and a dirner for the four cost over 200. They contemplated ecoping from Paris after the perpetration of their crime; but, as they had spent their money in orgies of every kind, they wrote their money in orgies of every kind, they wrote the Maszini, who is now in London for nove. The Emperor had been kept acquainted with what was going on, but it did not prevent him from going out as usual, and the police, annewing that Monday or Tuesday was fred for the strempt, made all sure by arresting the conspirators on Sunday evening. We are sble to give our readers the following information regarding the capture of these vessels, which we obtained from some of the crews of one of them. The accounts, therefore, though undoubtedly true in the main, if not altogether, must not be taken as official: On Thursday last the Amanda, Capt. Larrabee, 600 tons burthen, Stewards and Croasbury, of Bangor, Maine, owners, from Manilla for Cork, for orders, with a cargo of $55 tons sugar and 4,000 bales hemp, loaded, we believe, by Messrs. Halliday, For & Co., of London, when about two hundred miles from Java Head, and in company with two or: three British vessels, was sieering S. W., a large vessel was perceived coming up astern, and was taken for a Spanish gunboat, but on nearing, she showed British colors, and ordering the Amanda to back her main, yard, and lay by, informed her that a boat would immediately be sent off to her. A best was accordingly lowered filled with armed men, and sent alongoide the doomed vessel, when the Alabama hoisted the confederate fing (white ground, with a red square, a blue cross, and thirteen stare.) The lleutenant, on coming on board the Amanda, ordered the master and make to accompany him to the cruiser, and to bring with him the ship's papers and and other documents. They were then conducted before Captain Semmes, who, after the Amanda to be the legally captured prine of the Alabama. Therefore they were enent back to their own ship, and with the rest of the crew was cut up into small pieces, laid over the hold, and set on fire. The men were then, almost suffocated, sent on board the Alabama, and placed below in irons, with the excention of one man, who was sick. Next
